Drivers and influencing factors of migration and forced displacement

Climate Change: Challenges in the MENA Region

Highly vulnerable to climate change as the world's most water-stressed region

11 out of the 17 most water-stressed countries are located in the MENA region

Climate Change and Displacement

23.7 million new displacements related to disasters in 2021

Up to 216 million people could move internally within their countries by 2050 (IDMC, 2022)

II. Resources needed by people on the move

Adequate camp coordination and camp management operations can increase sustainability of displacement sites and reduce their footprint

Energy and displacement

94 percent of forcibly displaced people living in camps do not have meaningful access to power

Water stress and migration

To prevent forced migration resulting from water-related factors

To provide assistance and protection to affected populations and seek durable solutions where forced migration does occur

To facilitate migration as a possible adaptation strategy to environmental change

Need for innovative financing

Leverage community resources and support resilience

Cash assistance can empower communities and increase access to meet their needs

Key Messages

1. Ensure sustainability of displacement sites and sustainable resource management
2. Explore Innovative financing such as cash-based interventions and diaspora engagement
3. Respect, protect and fulfil the rights of migrants and address displaced people's needs
4. Work towards Skills Mobility Partnerships to address the global need of green skills and ensure that migrants also have access to these skills
